Call for Papers

Global ageing is one of the most significant societal challenges that we face in the current times. As countries around the world move towards achieving the Sustainable Development Goals, there is much evidence that emerges on the range of inequalities that reduce the wellbeing of older adults. In the last two decades we have amassed evidence on older adults' living arrangements, health status and intergenerational relationships. In this conference we encourage researchers to push the boundaries of ageing research by exploring new conceptualizations of ageing research with innovative theories, datasets, analysis techniques and ways of sharing scientific knowledge. Through the interrelated sub-themes of work, care and mobility we hope to stimulate active discussions on new pathways to ageing research.

Cambridge University Press Sponsored Special Workshop: Writing for Ageing and Society

This workshop will focus on how to navigate the publishing process. Editors from the journal Ageing and Society will share their insights on the common weak features of research papers, and elaborate on issues that researchers should watch out for when drafting their manuscripts. There will be ample time for discussions. A special selection of articles on India published by Ageing and Society journal will be available at the event. The workshop will be followed by a reception. Please register in advance for the workshop. More information will be followed.
